CALL FOR PAPERS

on ATTITUDE and BEHAVIOUR MODIFICATION as CONTROL

Attitude and behaviour modification as a form of control is at the heart of the prison system. The techniques employed for attitude and behaviour modification are as varied as the ideologies of the regimes which employ them. A forthcoming issue of the Journal of Prisoners on Prisons will examine these various control techniques. We encourage prisoners and former prisoners to submit articles on this topic.

We would like to include essays, research papers, and interviews from as many countries as possible. We are especially eager to receive submissions from countries with very high per capita prison populations: Canada, Israel, Malaysia, New Guinea, South Africa, Thailand, and the United States.

Prisoners and former prisoners should send to us a brief (250 — 500 word) description of their planned submissions. This will give the editors an opportunity to correspond with contributors before the submission deadline and to insure that the various articles will fit nicely with each other.

Submissions may be up to 15,000 words in length. Papers may be typed, handwritten, or on computer disc. Submissions in languages other than English or French will be translated into English.

Special editors for this issue on attitude and behaviour modification as control are Little Rock Reed and Robert Gaucher.

Deadline for submissions is June 30, 1992.
